

Holmes claims the malt loaf crown

Holmes is still running strongly despite having celebrated his 40th birthday

FELL runner, Ian Holmes, has given warning he is not giving way to younger athletes – without a fight.

Holmes, who recently celebrated his 40th birthday, clocked up his 11th consecutive win in the Soreen Stanbury Splash last Sunday, leaving a host of top athletes training in his wake.

The Yorkshire Fell Running champion is looking to take national honours again, despite being classified a 'veteran' runner.

"He has totally dominated the race," said race organiser Dave Woodhead.

Almost 300 athletes took part in the race, which is nicknamed 'Maltloaf Run' because every competitor gets as loaf from race sponsors Soreen.

The route for the event was changed at the last minute following a request from English nature and many runners though the new course was actually better than the traditional route. Those taking part had scenic views around the head of the valley with the 292 runners spread across the skyline.

"The weather conditions were almost perfect with sunshine making it feel almost spring-like," Dave Woodhead said.

Holmes finished the 7-mile race, which includes 1200ft of climbing, in 41mins 53 secs. He was almost two minutes ahead of a nearest rival, Tim Austin from Derbyshire who finished in 43:25. Third place went to fellow over-40 runner Dave Neill (44:14).

Natalie White, who is also the current Yorkshire Champion, won the women's race. The Bingley athlete was 29th overall and set a time of 49:01 well ahead of Sharon Taylor (52:51) who won the race in 2003 and 2004.

Third place went to the improving Tamara Hird (54:29).

Robin Bradbury won the locals trophy finishing in 19th place overall. The cyclist, who works at Aire Valley Cycles in Keighley, set a time of 48:11. Second place went to former winner Colin
